

Some things on my mind after watching "Schools Out" for the umpteenth time...

How about Lucy Fernandez's neon spandex outfit she wore to the cabin party! Do you think maybe she had it on under the grad gown when she gave her valedictorian speech?

Was anyone else grossed out by Caitlin in her bathing suit?

Didn't Joey read Archie comics? How could he have thought dating 2 girls at one time could possibly work? And didn't the girls notice he was 5'2"? Why was he such a catch?

And how about when he's on Tessa's doorstep and goes "Whoa, nice house." All's he's seen is her crummy red front door.

Did they model Wheel's mullet from a David Koresh poster?

Did anyone else notice Raditch dancing at Simon/Alexis's wedding?

Do you think Snake introduced himself as Snake or Archie at school? Has their ever been a bigger mamma's boy then him? He sits in his car, WEARING HIS SEATBELT, waiting for his mommy to drive him to university.

Did anyone else get the feeling that Wheels was saying his lines in his head first before he said them out loud?

Which was a lamer gift, Joey's engagement ring or Tessa's "Naughty and nice" birthday t-shirt?

Where would you rank Tessa on the "Psycho Chick Scale"? I'd throw her at about a 8.4, right ahead of Stacey from Wayne's World and right behind Jessie Spano from "Saved by the Bell". (FYI, a perfect 10.0 would of course be Doug Christie's wife Jackie).

Who else had the same phone as Tessa in the late 80s/early 90s? Mine was beige.

When the series finished up, did they send Joey's fedora directly to the CBC Hall of Fame, or did Pat Mastroiomi get to keep it?

Who else would have loved an appearance by Authur Kobalowski where he's gotten thinner, lost the Ronald MacDonald fro and started up a successful business and Toronto's first Internet entrepreneur? What lady could resist that?